PERUVIAN POTTERY.

This pottery was dug up in Peru some five or six years ago. Most of it being found eighty feet below the surface, and no doubt was made by the race driven out by the Incas some 300 or 400 years before the Spanish Conquest, consequently it may be called Antique, none of it being modern. It is rarer even than Grecian or Roman pottery, and should command a high price. It is guaranteed and is in splendid order.

- 2 50 262 Red Clay Water Bottle, in shape of a human figure in a squatting position; the face and head are represented on the neck, and the arms, which go from the body to the neck, form handles. Very fine. height 10 in.
- 3 00 263 Another, somewhat similar in shape, but larger and more elaborate, the face, ears, hands, etc., being painted white. The hands on this bottle project from the body in front of the face, and resemble two ears. Very fine indeed.
height 12 in.
- 2 50 264 Vase or Bottle of brilliant red clay, ovoid form, having a cat or vicuña coiled about the neck. Very curious and extra rare. Perfect. height 11 in.
- 1 00 265 Water Jar. Brick red clay, pointed-bottom, handle on either side, with some sacred animal projecting above. Very curious. Must be placed on its neck. height 7½ in.
- 1 00 266 Water Jar. Light redish gray clay; tapering toward top and bottom; two handles on neck and a face resembling an owl's, with two small arms curved together beneath it. Has a small piece broken out of rim, but this injury is so slight that it is not worth mentioning. Very fine. height 7 in.
- 1 50 267 Water Bottle, red clay, canteen shape, with decoration in white (resembles the Grecian pottery), with two small perforated handles, and a miniature lion in relief. Imperfect, but valuable. 5½ in., 5x4 in.
- 50 268 Kettle or Cauldron, for boiling water, black clay, with two handles. This dish, when not in use, stands on its top. Very fine, with traces of smoke. 5 in. high, 4 in. diam.
- " 269 Drinking Cup of red clay, human face on either side, decorated with white and black bands.
Height, 5 in., diameter, 2½ in.

- 200 270 Drinking Cup of light gray clay, with human mask on either side. Very curiously, and even rudely, fashioned. This is one of the rarest pieces in the collection. It was used only in the Temple of the Sun, and was sacred to that deity. Very rare. 3 in. high, 2 in. diameter
- 25 271 Round shallow dish of reddish-brown clay, used for cooking, as the bottom is covered with smoke. Height, 3 in., diameter, 5 in.
- 20 272 'Terra Cotta Hat, light gray clay, with white band near outside rim. This hat was taken from the head of a god. It would serve equally well for a basin. Very rare. 2½ in. high, 9 in. diameter.
- 25 273 Very finely modeled Head, in red clay, with projecting nose and ears. On the back of the Head is a flat handle, one inch long. This is probably the neck of some very fine water bottle. Rare and valuable. Height and diam. 3 in.
- 140 274 Very fine black Water Bottle, melon-shape, with flaring top and two handles, one of them being a peculiarly ugly monkey. There is a crack on one side of the Bottle and a small piece out of the neck. Still, very rare and valuable. Height 13 in. Diam. of neck 4½ in.

CYPRUS POTTERY.

Some of the pieces obtained by General Cesnola, all very fine and exceedingly rare.

- 100 275 Red terra-cotta Dish, something the shape of a sugar bowl, with two side handles and very short neck; decorated with black lines running around the body and in the form of concentric circles. Very fine and rare. Perfect. diam. 5, height 4½ in.
- 120 276 Two handled bowl-shaped Dish, very light red clay, open top; decorated inside with broad and narrow bands. Outside similar to last. Very fine. Rare. 4 in. high, diam. 5 in.
- 125 277 Discus, or Dish, used by the priests to hold the entrails of birds for an Augury. Yellowish clay, decorated with bands, lines, crosses, etc. in deep reddish brown. Pierced with two holes for suspension. Very curious and rare. Height 2 in., diam. 7 in.
